111TH ANNUAL MEETING Marietta, Ohio, October 12-15, 1920

NEARLY a dozen times in its history, the American Board has held its annual meeting in Ohio, beginning with a session in Cincinnati in 1853. But never before has it gathered in Marietta, a city older than the Board itself by twenty and more years. Marietta has not only a beautiful location, on the Ohio River where the Muskingum joins it, and looking across to the West Virginia hills, but it has a background interesting to all Congregationalists. Gen. Rufus Putnam and a band of New Englanders founded the place in 1788, and in the same year the Northwest Territory was formally organized there. One of the first things General Putnam and his associates did was to set off land for a public park; and opposite the park was built the "Two Horned Church," which till 1905, when it burned, was the oldest church building in the state. It was rebuilt, an exact replica of the old building; and in this "twohorned" structure, the home since its founding, in 1796, of First Church, Marietta, this 111th annual meeting of the American Board was held.

Mr. W. W.

Mills, chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, was indefatigable in showing hospitality to the large number of delegates, and aided in every way possible the smooth running of the meetings. The Exhibit, containing curios from Africa, pictures from China, industrial and missionary exhibits from Spain and from the Philippines, and the Board's "Crown Jewels" (famous Bible translations and books produced by missionaries in the past hundred years, etc.), was shown in the National Guard Armory and drew crowds of people, adults and children as well.

THE welcome to the city, to First Church, and to Marietta College, that institution which started as Muskingum Academy way back in 1797, was extended by Pres. Edward S. Parsons, of the college; while the response by

Pres. Edward C. Moore, of the Board, had a special significance, as he was graduated from Marietta College in 1877. The official reports of Home Department and Treasury were not read in full, since they were in type ready for distribution, but special points in each were noted and emphasized; and the topic which next to the Presidential election is all absorbing—Financing Congregational Missionary Work—was discussed by Dr. Herman F. Swartz, executive secretary of the Congregational World Movement, in a practical and kindling address.

One of the most moving sessions was that of the evening of October 12, when Rev. Francis J. Van Horn, of Oakland, Cal., preached the annual sermon—an original, brilliant, and gripping application of the story of the prophet who faced the frightened King Ahab (I Kings 20: 13, 14) with promise of deliverance. This evening closed with the communion service, always deeply impressive, as missionaries from far corners of the earth, officers and leaders of the Board at home, and members of the churches who stand behind the work all meet in intimate fellowship.

WITH less than ten minutes apiece to speak, five missionaries from India—Messrs. Cooper, Elwood, Gates, Saunders, and Rose—contrived to give clear-cut statements of India's new missionary problems, showing by inference how closely the missionaries' work fits in with that of the Indian government along educational and social lines. An hour full of thrills was that in which seven fire-tested men from the Near East—Messrs. Clarke, of Salonica; Reed, of Smyrna; Wingate, of Talas; Haas, of Adana; Merrill, of Aintab; Partridge, of Sivas; and Getchell, of Marsovan—made memorable portrayal of situations they had faced, and later answered questions put to them by their hearers.

The call for advance in the Philippines was brought by Rev. F. C. Laubach, of Cagayan, and Dr. F. O. Smith, who served at the hospital in Davao while debarred from his station in Turkey. Mr. Laubach believes we should take a "spiritual mandatary" for Mindanao, and that the successful approach to the Mohammedan problem today is to be made through the Moros of Mindanao. The Protestant Faith in Spain was spoken of by our one man missionary there, Rev. W. C. Bowers, who calls it a land of a million Nicodemuses, so many are the secret inquirers. Rev. Jerome C. Holmes, of Tokyo, came to bring a ringing appeal for Japan in her critical hour, not excusing her, but defending her needs. Mr. Harold B. Belcher, just home from Foochow, showed a novel side of missionary life as he told of the business end of a mission; and Rev. H. A. Stick, of Amanzimtoti, South Africa, spoke to the question, "Are Our African Converts Making Good" in winning their countrymen to Christianity?

China had her innings on the last day of the meeting, when six missionaries, namely, Messrs. Corbin, of Shansi; Donaldson, H. G. Hubbard, and Beard, of Foochow; Stanley, of Tientsin; and Storrs, of Shaowu, gave tidings of hope and progress from their fields, perhaps their most encouraging and remarkable stories relating to the student movement in national affairs, to countryside evangelism and the rapidly developing Chinese church.

DR. BARTON does not need to resort to pictures to make his survey of the American Board's world work graphic and real to his hearers; his words are warranted to do that. This year, however, he emphasized his story by accompanying its delivery with a group of stereopticon pictures, made from recent photographs and showing the missionary actors in the stirring scenes of the past year, as well as the setting of the events described. After Dr. Barton had spoken, to a crowded house by the way, two young men, sons of the Board's missions in Africa and India, who are now studying in America, were introduced by Secretary Eddy, and spoke of their lands' needs and of their own ambitions to help in meeting them.

The education of women in the Far East was appropriately considered, in this year of woman's enfranchisement, by three women speakers: Miss Helen Calder, secretary of the Woman's Board, gave her conclusions from her recent tour of the mission fields, dwelling particularly on India; Miss Charlotte De Forest, of Kobe College, told of the development of Japanese women; and Mrs. Alice Browne Frame described the place of the woman's college in the great, new university in Peking.

The address by Secretary Strong on the contribution of Foreign Missions to Internationalism elicited from the audience an expression of hearty agreement. The speech following, from Robert A. Woods, of Boston, eminent in his field of Social Christianity, who has just toured the East in the interests of the Sage Foundation, gave the appreciation of an expert observer of the social bearings of missions, and offered suggestions and fresh testimony from a new angle.

Forty-three missionaries, in attendance upon the meeting, were assembled on the platform on Thursday evening when the recruiting service began. Their experiences ranged all the way from drudgery to diplomacy, from teaching the utterly ignorant to developing the self-governing church. They looked resourceful and competent, and bore the distinction which comes from devotion to a cause and reliance not upon man. Seven recently accepted recruits spoke that evening in simple but effective words, four of them under appointment to Africa; and two of these received their commissions at the hands of President Moore. These were Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Taylor; Dr. Taylor going out to be associated with Dr. James B. McCord, of Durban, in his first medical school for the training of African young men. Rev. H. A. Stick, of Amanzimtoti, extended the welcome in behalf of his colleagues and to their work. This service closed with an impassioned address by Rev. D. A. Poling, associate president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, pressing the appeal of missionary service. It was a memorable evening.

At this annual meeting of 1920, the cultivation of the home field was more stressed than usual. Sec. Edward Lincoln Smith was warmly welcomed when he opened the subject in his speech on the New Home Base. Then the pastor's part in missionary promotion was emphasized in suggestive talks by Messrs. H. E. Brown, of Illinois; O. E. Maurer and W. H. Day, of Connecticut; and Franklin H. Warner, of New York. Their themes—In Pulpit and Prayer Meeting, The School of Missions, The Foreign Pastor, and The New Apportionment—drew out the testimony of experience in vivid and practical talks; which Dr. H. W. Gates, of Boston, followed by helpful and convincing recommendations of a definite program of missionary education. This strong and unusual session held the attention of many earnest pastors and church leaders, eager to discover the best methods of cultivating the spirit of missions.

An event of interest to the home base, also, was the introduction to the audience, by Dr. A. N. Hitchcock, of Chicago, for thirty-one years secretary for the District of the Interior, of his recently appointed successor, Rev. William F. English, Jr.

At the annual business meeting all officers were reelected, save that Mr. Harold B. Belcher, recently of the Foochow Mission, became assistant treasurer in place of Mrs. Hester Babson Huggins, who, since her recent marriage, has loyally continued to serve till her successor could be secured. Rev. Arthur Bradford, of Providence, R. I., was elected to the Prudential Committee, succeeding Rev. W. L. Sperry, of Boston, whose term expired; and Mr. Henry P. Kendall, of Norwood, Mass., follows Mr. Samuel Woolverton, of New York, on the Board of Auditors.

THE most dramatic moment of this annual meeting came in the closing session, when it was announced that the students and faculty of Marietta College had that very morning pledged the sum of $800 to provide the support of a graduate of Marietta as he shall be found to join the teaching staff of St. Paul's Institute in Tarsus.

It was said that with 230 present at the meeting when the pledges were made, there were 231 subscriptions—more than 100 per cent of response, if the figures are accurate. Inasmuch as the effort was to raise only $400, that being thought to be the highest figure practicable, the securing of $800 is evidence of the deep and generous interest Marietta takes in her foreign missionary adventure. Incidentally it may afford a sort of measure of the impression made by the annual meeting.

ON the closing Friday morning, after the tender service of intercession led by Secretary Bell, Summing Up Dr. Moore in the annual president's address gathered up the spirit of the meeting in a powerful argument for the world's need of the Christian religion. On the whole, the meeting impressed itself on some seasoned attendants as unsurpassed in a long series of American Board meetings. It was not large; not more than 250 visitors from outside the city were registered. But the speaking was on a uniformly high level, with the challenge to Christianity in these reactionary times very keenly felt. The weather was glorious, the city and surroundings beautiful, and the hospitality of Marietta warm and generous. A notable example of the latter was the delightful reception on Thursday afternoon, when all visitors were entertained at the home of President and Mrs. Parsons, of Marietta College.

Rev. W. L. Goldsmith, pastor of the church in which the meetings were held, spoke the closing words of farewell. President Moore made fitting response, and the one hundred and eleventh annual meeting was adjourned.

Treasurer's report and significant extracts from the Home Department report. These papers will be printed in full in the Board's Annual Report, which will appear later, but our readers have offered to them now two important statements bearing on the work of the past year at the Board's Home Base, and setting forth the situation from which we have now to move on. They will answer many questions which may be already in your minds.

THE exceptional attention paid at Marietta to the matter of missionary education in the churches, and the share taken in the discussion by several leading Congregational ministers, emphasizes the fact that the modern minister not only believes in foreign missions, but recognizes that they have place at the center of church life; and that he is devoting some of his best thought and planning to the problem of how to make his people intelligent and interested in this branch of the church work.

The day has gone by when foreign missions can be disregarded by a broad-minded and efficient minister; patronized with a very occasional missionary sermon or routine collection, and left out of the reckoning at all other times. It will not do for him to lament that his people do not care about foreign missions, and let it go at that. Foreign missions are too great a force in the world's life, too much in the eye of men of world affairs, and too vital a necessity to the saving of the church from narrowness and even dry rot, to allow any wide-awake leader of his people to suffer them to be overlooked.

Wide-awake Ministers Stress Missions

By courses of missionary reading or study, missionary institutes, a modern and versatile scheme of missionary meeting (the missionary concert revised and improved), a series of stereopticon addresses at connected dates through the winter, the use of missionary story and biography in sermon illustration—by these and other ways, as manifold as the ingenuity of the minister's mind, the alert pastor of today is seeking to instill missionary knowledge and interest among his people.

It is not an easy task; the lands and the work to be described are remote and foreign; the pressure of life close at hand is insistent and is likely to prevail. It requires zeal, tact, and patience, together with a good degree of wisdom and common sense, to keep foreign missions to the front in church life. But it can be done; it is being done by not a few of our ablest and most efficient ministers; and their churches are showing the benefit, to their own welfare as well as to that of the Kingdom throughout the world. We commend their example to others, especially to the younger brethren.

THE missionaries of the American Board are not dismayed by what they face; paganism is not insurmountable by the gospel. Before the added dangers and difficulties of war times, they are unyielding and unafraid.

The record of these recent years proves once more the heroism, physical and moral, of our missionary staff. Amid exciting scenes of battle and siege, they have stood firm; and in lands which lacked the stimulus of actual conflict, but felt the interruptions and the burdens of a world absorbed in war, they have held bravely to their task. The missionaries are not daunted by the foes they face; what takes the heart out of them is a disquieting fear as to their backing.

Theirs is like the soldier's case. A true soldier does not fear to meet his foe; he does not cringe before the danger ahead, or lie down because of the difficulties and hardships of his task. But what will spoil his morale and weaken his efficiency is the haunting suspicion that reinforcements are not forthcoming or that the supply train has broken down. The fear that behind him his support is failing is the soldier's deadliest enemy; it distracts his attention, disturbs his heart, and unnerves his arm.

Correspondence from the mission field and conversations with missionaries home on furlough furnish constant evidence that the heaviest anxieties they have at their task are not about the mission lands and peoples, but about this home land and its people: as to whether reinforcements are coming to maintain the line, to strengthen and carry through the undertaking; and as to whether the home people will realize how rapidly mount the needs of a growing and accomplishing missionary work; how dependent all programs and activities are upon funds and equipment to carry them out; how all strategy and heroism "over there" wait upon the measure of loyalty "over here."

A suspicion that there is a falling down in interest or provision at the home base is worse than chills and fever for reducing the missionary's vitality; it is pretty nearly a knock-out blow. When we pray for our missionaries that they may be enabled to face their difficulties and to bear their load, let us remember whence come their sharpest difficulty and their heaviest load!

ASSOCIATED PRESS dispatches, last month, reported thieving from the supplies of the Near East

The Near East Robbed

Relief at Constantinople.

This news was a startling surprise, and records a crime worse than mere stealing, for it is nothing less than taking food out of the mouths of the starving and clothing from the backs of the perishing. Private dispatches from Constantinople indicate that the peculations have not been extensive nor long continued. Dr. William W. Peet, the chairman of the Local Committee, says: "The difficulty comes, in the main, through the people who have come to us from France. They seem to have been, on the whole, a seamy lot. Colonel Coombs, the director, is putting in pretty vigorous work, and no one will be spared who is really guilty."

Dr. Barton, chairman of the Relief Committee, explains that quite a number of American relief workers from France were brought in—men who had served in some capacity in the war and were ready for a new adventure. "These served mostly as drivers of transportation trucks, a work to which we could not set our limited supply of choice young men who came out from America, and who, moreover, were needed in places of larger responsibility. It was impossible to handle the thousands of tons of equipment and supplies without employing large numbers of native workmen. We knew at the outset that there would be attempts at thieving, and every precaution was taken to prevent it. A considerable number of British troops were detailed for guard duty, together with some Turkish soldiers; and barbed wire entanglements were drawn about the area occupied by the landing docks and the warehouses, with the entrance guarded night and day by British soldiers. The entire outfit was under the command of a United States naval officer.

"The whole matter is being investigated to the bottom. The American high commissioner, Admiral Bristol, and the United States consul general are lending their services as well as the service of their offices. I have every confidence that whatever losses have occurred will be made practically good. The local committee of control are Dr. William W. Peet, treasurer of the American Board for the Near East; Prof. George H. Huntington, principal of the preparatory department of Robert College; and Rev. Dr. F. W. MacCallum, a missionary of the American Board, who is also at present acting as treasurer of the Near East Relief."

CHAPTERS ON CHINA'S "LITTLE WAR"

As Given in Letters from Shantung and Chihli

Shantung's Share

(Dr. F. F. Tucker, American Board Hospital, Tehchow, July 12)

General Shang,* in charge of the troops here, says that he will not strike the first blow, and if Gen. Ma Liang's* men let his alone, there will be no fighting in this region. The breaks in the railway are nine miles south of here, a rail here and another there being torn up to delay Ma's men from coming north. General Shang has taken over the arsenal, and now has 11,000 troops at his disposal. No trains southbound, and those for the north are crowded. More soldiers constantly arriving. Grain supplies running very low and prices soaring. The coming of the soldiery makes matters much worse, as grain cannot come in by train. Soldiers are behaving well so far. It is all a grim game, but nevertheless the mission hospital is asked to be prepared to care for the seriously wounded, and arrangements are being made to do this.

July 13. Mr. MacEachron and myself went on a troop train to Hwang Ho Mai (Yellow River Bank, nine miles southeast, and where is a church outstation). There we changed to a solitary car, and a huge engine pulled us as far as the soldiers go by train. The soldiers (anti-Anfuites) continue to come, and are quartered in all the villages of the region.

There have been many applications for persons and goods to take refuge here. Mr. Campbell, of the Standard Oil Company, wired from Tsinan for his servants to deliver his valuables here, and they came (six cases) today. One note read this way, "Sorry to bother you with a piano and a few boxes for a few weeks till the war is over." But we are saving most of the "space" for patients—should there be any.

July 17. TEHCHOWITIS.—This is a new kind of disease, limited to the last few days, but not limited to this part of China. Near midnight, last night, came a note from the man in charge of the telegraphs here, reading, "Can you put about twenty or thirty of our boxes in your hospital?" Of course we replied we would be glad to give housing to the goods, but naturally we reserve the hospital for other purposes!

Last evening a man applied to keep his three mules in the hospital yard, as he knew the military would commandeered them if we did not take them in. We refused, as it's the privilege of the government (if there is any) to commandeered mules if it wishes. This morning a military official brings his family here, and, under the circumstances, the women and children are allowed to stay.

July 20. In the past twenty-four hours we have been under the flag of the "Imperial Republic" of China, it is true, but we have also found it well to have the Stars and Stripes quite prominent. Early Sunday morning,

* Ma Liang, Military Commissioner of Tsinanfu, capital of Shantung, has been a supporter of the Anfu Club (Peking) for some time. He has been allowed much freedom of action by a more or less indolent "tu-chun" (governor) until he trained ten thousand (10,000) troops to be the only real soldiers there. Hence when the troubles broke out between the conflicting parties at Peking he readily responded to Tuan Chi-ju'i's (of the Anfu Club party, and pro-Japanese) orders to move on to Tehchow, where is a government arsenal and thus threaten Chang Tsao-lin's forces which were massing in the region of Tientsin.

Soon after the Boxer troubles of 1900, the arsenal was removed from Tientsin and rebuilt at Tehchow, to get it as far away as possible from the hated "foreigner." For years this arsenal has been guarded by a cordon of soldiers, and no one without a pass allowed within its vicinity; neither have Japanese been allowed to reside in Tehchow on account of it. At the time of the outbreak this summer, the arsenal and the railroad (Tientsin-Pukow to Shanghai, and passing through Tehchow and Tsinanfu) were controlled by anti-Anfuite forces, General Shang Teh Chien in charge. It was supposed, therefore, that General Ma's advance on Tehchow was to get control of the war material stored there. Little did any one suppose that for some time it has only been an empty shell, making soldiers' clothing, since there was no money with which to buy materials for munitions.

July 18, the firing to the south was clearly heard. At the close of the Sunday morning service, Mr. Kuan, the preacher, suggested the possibility of forming a refuge society for women and children. A meeting was called for Sunday afternoon, and all were greatly surprised to find the church crowded with the leading men, scholars, merchants, etc. Mr. Kuan was made chairman. Everything was put in the hands of a committee of twenty-two, and it is this committee that has handled matters since.

Monday, rumor reached us that General Shang and his men were leaving the city. I heard, by accident, that he was at the railway station. I learned direct from him of the defeat of the day before, but conversation with a number of officers on both sides indicates that there was really no battle at all. General Shang was downcast, but the kindly gentleman he always is. He had been down the line the night before, but had come back convinced that the opposing forces were not only more numerous, but better equipped. Some of his men complained they did not want to retire, but all, including Shang himself, had orders from above, their main objective now being to keep Ma Liang from moving northward too fast. There was little excitement—that being left for the civilian population. Folks in the city, with their valuables (if any) bundled up, were escaping to the country, and the country folks were coming to the city.

Mr. MacEachron, from the very beginning of things, had been a whole host in himself, in organizing and directing the forces within the compound—especially in the matter of assigning quarters for those admitted, and in taking care of valuable boxes, etc., sent here for safe keeping. I asked Mr. Yun, our Christian ex-Mohammedan banker, in regard to his funds, and found the silver had been buried and the bills had been sent out here. One box of valuables reposes in the fireplace of the hospital office; the seal of the telegraph office is here, as are all the instruments, etc.

Now Tehchow has no trains, no mails, and no telegraphs. Carts have all been taken by one military side or the other, as well as barrows, and even coolies have been impressed. We can but be thankful that so good and prompt a job was done in putting up the dike and outfacing wall about the mission compound, and that the Boys' Academy buildings are now available, as the term has ended. There are about three hundred in the compound now, and over half of those are refugee women and children. Should there be an aftermath of some military reverse, there will be more admissions, and when the buildings are full, there are arrangements for mat sheds to be put up.

In all the arrangements, etc., Miss Peng and Dr. Marian Yang [both Chinese] have been the finest co-operating force we have had in the compound. Dr. Yang is at this moment making her daily sanitary inspection of the refugees in the dormitories of the two schools, for, so far, most of the people are housed there. Miss Peng is chairman of the evangelistic committee to make use of the present opportunity.

Till the Refuge Society advised we take refugees, we kept all out we possibly could, among them some women from the yamen and others. They did not like it any too well; and, most of them being thin with fright, a lot of them crawled under the closed and locked academy gate. Servants and others (emphasis on the "others") in the buildings to the south hoisted their belongings over the wall as soon as they heard firing, for "do not we belong to the church?" How they, themselves, got in, it's too late to ask, for is not all fair in love and war?

Near midnight, last night, a message came suggesting that I come to the South Suburb and join with others in going outside to meet General Ma Liang—sort of a committee of welcome. Having helped to escort one general out of town, and not really knowing when the next was coming, I concluded a sleep was more important.

At three, this morning, a message came (after some firing had been heard) to the effect that a company of cavalry had come to the city and were quartering themselves here, but everything was peaceful. At eight, I had to go to the city to meet the committee. Soon after reaching there, it was reported that soldiers were coming. We hastened to the front steps of the church, and found a most soldierly officer just dismounting. He shook hands and was most cordial in every way, expressing gratification on his own behalf and that of his men that he should be so cordially welcomed, etc. Properly enough, some one asked his honorable name.

He replied modestly, "I'm General Ma!" Sure enough, no one had recognized Ma Liang, himself! The information was quite tonic, and at just that time the large general committee of welcome came from the city. General Ma (who has had pleasant relations with the Christian workers in Tsinan) mounted the stone steps of the church and gave a twenty-minute talk along patriotic lines. As he finished speaking, other troops came up, and he rode off at the head of the column on his fine foreign horse, every muscle alert and every inch a soldier. There were perhaps five thousand men, or more, all in good order and finely equipped. There was plenty of transport, with light guns and small cannon. They are not out on a picnic, and we now better understand General Shang's wisdom in withdrawing.

Both generals have the thought that there may be another stand at Sang Yuan, fifteen miles north. Meantime the American flag, under which Ma Liang spoke this morning, still waves, as also the Chinese flag of the Republic; and that of General Ma, himself, is likely to remain for some time. That of General Shang we see no more. Three are enough. The Red Cross flag is a part of all of them.

A TROOP TRAIN

On which soldiers and foreigners were carried to the break in the railway several miles southeast of Tehchow, Shantung, hoping to delay the northward march of Ma Liang's army. In the political-military uprising of North China, July, 1920

A day or two thereafter, Ma Liang was defeated by Shang, reënforced by Chang Tsao-lin's troops from the north. So, writing under date of July 25, Dr. Tucker says:—

I have just been using the transit-instrument as a telescope, and could see thousands of Ma Li-ang's troops marching southeast. The southward movement has been going on now for two days, and Ma, himself, went to Tsinan yesterday by train. However, there are not cars and engines enough for all the more than ten thousand troops, horses, etc., so many must go overland. At this time the maneuvers might be entitled, "Three advances, two of which backward;" for, first, General Shang retreated north, then Ma advanced in the same direction; and now the latter, having halted at the border of Shantung, takes himself and his troops back home again. It seems a retreat in no sense. The troops marched outside the city, rather than through it, which many think was due to the favorable treatment the city gave Ma and his troops when he entered, including a considerable money gift. Sang Yuan suffered badly at the hands of both armies. Wang Hsi Tseng, our helper there, lost his things, for the simple reason that he had deposited them at a place other than the church premises. The latter were not disturbed.

July 29. Nearing the end (of the Tehchow War Scare). On the 27th, I was one of a large committee to meet Shang as he came back to Tehchow, and with him was efficient Ts'ao, a brother of Ts'ao K'un, a soldier with exact command over his men. They took pains to assure me that our Refugee Society was appreciated, and would be protected in every way.

Last evening came the first train into Tehchow for some days—from Tientsin. Four missionaries were aboard, and were my guests last night. They wished to get to Tsinan as soon as possible, and thanks to the courtesy of General Shang, they were put aboard troop trains carrying discharged soldiers. These former soldiers are being sent home, discharged, with a bonus of ten dollars each, and they are a happy lot.

August 4. Aftermath. The military situation is quiet. Soldiers are numerous in all directions, but quite orderly. A conference now going on in Peking will perhaps settle matters, and again the dove of peace will poise in the air—with sufficient gasoline for at least a few days!

Events in Chihli

Chihli is that province in China in which is located Peking, Tunghsien, Tientsin, etc. Tunghsien, fifteen miles east of Peking, is connected with the capital by a railroad, and also by a good road made by the flood refugees, under missionary direction, two years ago. At Tunghsien, Rev. W. B. Stelle is in charge of evangelistic and outstation work. He had his experiences during the "Little War," and we quote from one of his letters:—

"I have just had four weeks of soldiering and Red Cross organizing in Tunghsien. The battles were along the line of our seven churches on the Peking-Hankow Railway, west and south of Peking. The capital was the contested citadel, and daily vibrated with increasing dangers. If the soldiers broke loose and looted Peking, Tunghsien, fifteen miles east, was the next handy booty. For a month there were no passenger trains out to Tunghsien, and for the most of that time the gates in the Peking city wall were closed tight."

"Revived Village" is the western hemisphere of the Tunghsien Christian community, while the eastern hemisphere contains the home of the missionaries and the North China American school. "Revived Village" was made up largely of Christians from various sections, who had secured indemnities after the Boxer trouble, had purchased land, and established themselves in this part of Tunghsien. They did not all harmonize all the time with their neighbors in the other half of the town. However, when both lobes of the community were threatened with looting soldiers, it became necessary to unite in a protective organization. Mr. Stelle says:—

"The size of our guard was limited to the number of guns available. There were forty-two in all, but about ten of the firearms were very primitive. We were captained by a most competent young Chinese teacher. We divided into two squads, each patrolling half the night, and the division not on duty holding itself ready to respond to a general call. With full duties by day, it made strenuous work for dog days. Many villages were plundered, but the officers in charge of the under-paid, poorly fed, untrained, and disappointed troops deserve much credit. There were no barracks. Roll call was frequent, to detect deserters. Tension was high, and it was only the Chinese temperament which held back from an explosion.

"With our small guard, the compound seemed a stronghold to the Christians and acquaintances living in neighboring villages. All Christians were privileged to bring their families and possessions to us. With a nucleus from the school church and the branch church in the city, a Red Cross Society was formed. Three refuges for frightened women and children, one in the academy, one in the government school, and one in the Mohammedan mosque. Clinics were organized, one under Chinese methods and one under Western. Thirteen Chinese doctors volunteered, though we could not approve of some of their methods. Yet the desire to help one's fellows to the best of one's ability must be approved by all. Those bent on service were all the more eager when it was clear that they were not striving for personal gain. One Mohammedan, in explaining to others that they could not guarantee absolute safety for the women and children in the refuge, quietly stated that he proposed to stand at the door and explain to any mob that gathered that within were no possessions, only helpless women and children; but whoever entered must go over his dead body.

"If all our effort only secured acquaintance with some of the princely men whom we worked with, day after day, it was highly worth while. The little churches were not lights hid under a bushel, and the kindred spirits who delighted in their lights because their deeds were good are enduring assets for the Kingdom of God."

Tunghsien Looted

Poor Tunghsien! Demolished in 1900; looted and burned in 1912; on August 26, 1920, a telegram announced to friends outside the danger districts: "Compound safe. American Marines guarding. Hospital full. The soldiers in the city looted. Forty of best stores on the main street burned. Loss over a million and a half."

A letter from Miss Alice M. Huggins, teacher in the girls' school in Tunghsien, describes the night of terror, when the "discharged" soldiers got away from control, and with ruffians who had never been under control destroyed the business and residence parts of the city.

Wakened by the constant firing, Miss Huggins became convinced that there was trouble. She tried to telephone Peking, but the Tunghsien "Central" was in the city where the fighting was going on, so she got no connection. Telegraph conditions were the same. Meantime frightened folks came rushing to the mission premises, sleepy children, bound-footed women climbing over the iron fence, in spite of the spikes on the top of the rails.

At two o'clock, they managed to start a messenger for the next town on the road to Peking, with instructions that if he couldn't raise the city by wire, he was to go himself and find Dr. Wilder and ask for help. The looters, fortunately, preferred to stay in the city, where were the stores, post office, banks, etc., instead of coming out to the missionary quarter, where they were not sure what they would find. Also some of them remembered what happened after the Boxer affair.

Toward daybreak, the missionaries began to hear autos, and presently a big auto truck brought American Marines from Peking. The lieutenant in charge said the city "looked like a bit of France." The whole shopping district had been literally torn to pieces and then set fire to—grain shops, paper shops, pawnshops, banks, cloth shops, silk shops, with thousands of dollars' worth of silk, and even the post office.

"Our city church was untouched, not even the court entered. Afterwards we heard that the Salvation Army worker and her Chinese assistant, both young women who live right down in the city, were much frightened. Soldiers would come, beat on the gate, then see the sign that it was a church, and say there'd be nothing there and go on. We thought we had a hectic night, but those girls were really in danger.

"The Marines stayed for a few days. The Chinese officers of the troops which were under control began sending away the discharged and irregular forces. Three hundred on whom loot was found were reported to have been shot, and the Peking authorities seemed determined to do everything in their power to restore order."

THE MARDIN TRANSFER

ONE of the most important news statements in the Foreign Department's Survey at the Annual Meeting, last month, had reference to the transfer of the Board's station at Mardin to the Presbyterians. Established in 1861, it is located in Northern Mesopotamia, and was the only station of the Board where the Arabic tongue was used. In addition to its evangelistic work, it contained, in pre-war times, a high school for boys and another for girls; and a hospital and dispensary, which served a wide field in Mesopotamia and among Syrian peoples.

The Presbyterian Board, with headquarters in Beirut, is opening another station for Arabic-speaking people in Aleppo. The Bagdad Railway connects Mardin directly with the Arabic-speaking fields to the south, while it has no natural connection with the Board's stations to the north and west. So, upon recommendation of the Eastern Turkey Mission, the Mardin station has been transferred to the Presbyterian Board in the interests of more effective and economic administration.

Writing of the Mardin station, Miss Diantha Dewey, one of the Woman's Board staff at Mardin since 1905, says:—

"If you want to know what has been done by the mission at Mardin, it is not sufficient to look at the city itself, though our pastor and teachers are fine products of our schools, full of consecration to God's work in their own land. They have stood by in the face of great privations and dangers, not thinking of themselves, but of their duty to their fellow men. And they are still there, though they hear alluring accounts of the life in other lands and of the salaries they might earn there.

"But this is not all the fruit of the Mardin station. Go to the mission of the Reformed Church in Arabia, and see its workers and ask where they are from; and so in Bagdad and in Mosul; in Aleppo, Alexandretta, Antioch, and other places in Syria; in Egypt, in Armenia, and see the work they are doing. Who have been interpreters for the Near East Relief? Who have been interpreters for the British army? The English educational officer in Mesopotamia is begging us for more teachers and offering wonderful salaries, and yet our teachers stay by us, not thinking of glory or riches, but loving the land of their birth.

"Let us pray that the civilized nations may help these Christian people to secure the right to live and be free to worship God in their own way, and perchance to save what money they earn, and to be able to own a little home in which they may eat the fruit of their own vine and fig tree."

THE HODJA LADY

BY JOHN KINGSLEY BIRGE, OF SMYRNA

THE most interesting and most promising work that we in Smyrna have started recently is through a girl, Marie Yeghiayan, a graduate of last June from the normal class of the American Collegiate Institute for Girls.

In the spring, when I talked with her, she was filled with the most extreme kind of bitterness against the Turks. She said she wouldn't believe there was such a thing as a good Turk; that she wouldn't believe it, if she saw with her own eyes a Turk helping an Armenian! But at the spring Student Conference she experienced as clear a case of spiritual conversion as I ever saw. On the last night of the conference, while we were waiting at the station for the train, she walked up and down the platform, just bubbling over with joy, and told me that she was going to give her life in missionary work among the Turks. She had been writing letters to her five brothers and filling them with bitterness. Since the conference, she has been writing along a different line, and already one of her brothers has gone into a school where he is teaching Moslems, in order to help them.

The girl has an aunt in Adana who is a Bible-woman, and who is all the time working for the Turks. When vacation came, we decided to employ Marie as Bible-woman, with responsibility just for work among the Turks. She has been living at the Turkish school in Salahane, i. e., at our American school for Turks there, and has been busy every day doing personal work for the Turkish people.

She seems to know how to handle them wonderfully. On the trolley, for example, she got into a conversation with a hodja (teacher), who was surprised to see her reading a Turkish paper. She talked with him and told him a little about the ideals of the American schools here, and the hodja agreed with nearly everything. He said that he and many of the Turkish hodjas knew what the truth was, but that the time was not ripe yet for their preaching it.

One day, Marie saw a little girl sitting alone in a garden. She talked with the child and told her about the world, for the little lass did not know there was anything to it except just Smyrna. The girl invited her to her home, and Marie went there not knowing how the mother would take her visit. The mother, however, was most appreciative, and when the word was spread around that the hodja lady was in the house, a number of the neighbors gathered to join in the conversation.

Marie talked to them and told them how for Christians there is no difference in race or nationality, but that we are all really brothers; that God made us all and loved us so much that he sent his own Son into the world in order to draw the world to himself. The women were greatly impressed and wanted her to come and talk again.

Marie was invited to several Turkish weddings. At one she met a girl who had been married very young, and who was now going to be divorced from her husband. The poor girl unburdened her heart to Marie, and begged her to go and talk with the husband in an effort to patch up the trouble.

When I talked with Marie last she said she had been to see the girl at her home, but had not yet been able to see the husband.

Somehow or other, through such contacts as these, Marie met one of the Turkish government officials and had a long talk with him. He said he thought that there was nothing but selfishness in the world; everybody out for himself. Marie told him about the American missionary work and what the Americans were anxious to do for the Turkish people. The man said he had never heard of such things, and he is anxious to talk with us. He has about six little girls, several of whom are meeting with Marie in a little school three times a week. Part of the school time is taken with a study of English, but part also in a study of how to live in a home, how to help their mothers, how to keep things clean and wholesome, and how to show real love for people who need help.

MAY THE HODJA LADY MEET HER!

THE SEPTEMBER RECEIPTS

THE statement for September shows that the year does not start as well as it did twelve months ago. Fortunately we never estimate the trend of giving by the showing of a single month. There are unmistakable signs of a rising tide of interest in the Board's work and we look for a period of large gains. Last year, it may be recalled, the churches made a gain of $106,000. Unfortunately this was offset by a loss of $115,000 in legacies and kindred sources of income. This year the churches should not only maintain the gain of 1920, but reach a far higher level on account of the growing impetus of the Congregational World Movement.

Examination of the statement above will show a slight loss in donations and considerable loss in receipts from legacies. The total loss for the month was $18,235.

CONGREGATIONAL WORLD MOVEMENT PROGRESS

Intense activity is found in Congregational World Movement circles these fall days, especially in behalf of those churches which prefer to make the Every-Member-Canvass in December. With them the year's program is coming to the front with a rush, and the time is all too short for adequate preparation.

Let it be kept clearly in mind that the Movement is stressing three great objectives for the fall, winter, and spring. There are many things the Movement would like to do by way of following the programs voted by the National Council, but on account of the critical condition of our Missionary Boards and our Educational Institutions, the Commission of One Hundred voted this year to concentrate upon Missionary Education, Stewardship, and the Financial Canvass. Logically these objectives should be taken up in that order, and where churches are in a position to enter into the splendid plans for Missionary Education and the inculcation of the spirit and method of Stewardship, the Financial Canvass will follow almost as a matter of course.

Several states, like Maine, Vermont, and Northern California, have voted in favor of the spring date for the canvass, and we are glad to learn that in Massachusetts certain of the local Associations are likely to advise their churches to make their canvass on some Sunday to be agreed upon next April. Wherever the spring date is adopted there will be time for an unhurried and a fairly thorough process of Missionary Education, and on this account we are inclined to urge that such a course be followed. Where, however, churches have a well-established custom of conducting their Every-Member-Canvass in December, there would appear to be an advantage in adhering to that practice. We judge that in the Eastern States fully half of the churches will follow that course. Where this is the case it is important that intensive educational work be done in November. The Movement stands ready through its Regional and District Directors to aid the churches in all sorts of ways, especially in the use of the Survey and the Digest of the Survey and the Stewardship Chart, which will be furnished to every congregation.

Officers of the American Board are throwing themselves heart and soul into this Movement, and we trust the friends of foreign missions everywhere will join in the effort. If the goal of $5,000,000 for our Congregational missionary and educational interests can be achieved in 1921, it will mean not only that the large increase in the Board's appropriations made necessary last year and to be repeated this year, namely, $305,000, will be provided for, but also that there will come to the Board the additional sum of $440,000. This increase, while by no means meeting adequately the present needs of the Board, will be a tremendous help. Wherever the officers of the Board have come into contact with churches and ecclesiastical gatherings this fall, they have been impressed by the readiness of the people to accept the new financial goal and to push our missionary enterprise as never before. The campaign starts well.

RESTORE THE MISSIONARY PRAYER MEETING

In our opinion, the time has come when the Missionary Prayer Meeting should be recovered to the church. In the early days of the Board the monthly "Missionary Concert" was an established institution in nearly every church. The meeting was ordinarily held on the first Thursday of each month, and on this account it was spoken of as a concert of prayer. The value of this meeting to the missionaries and to the Board was beyond expression. In this way a group of people in each church became familiar with the names of the missionaries, their fields, and the circumstances of the work. Thence arose many special gifts and not a few legacies, and best of all, volunteers.

Later the name "Concert" was dropped, and less attention was given to prayer and more to rehearsing the news and engaging in discussion on missionary themes. Even so the practice of a monthly consideration of the Board's work continued to be of special value. Unfortunately in many instances the program became conventional, people read from the missionary magazines instead of talking, the women and young people began to hold separate meetings, and gradually the good old custom fell away. Comparatively few churches today maintain a successful monthly service of this kind.

Without attempting to revive the old style of meeting in all its detail, we believe the concert of prayer should be reestablished in the church. We have come into a distinctly new era in this work. It is no longer a question of saving a few souls here and there, but of saving nations and races. The foreign missionary is the true internationalist, the guardian of the peace and welfare of the world. Statesmen, economists, and captains of industry are urging the church to get busy in the realm of international affairs. Periodicals and books are full of interesting material. Travelers are returning with stories of remarkable interest. God is moving mightily upon the world. In what better way can the home church maintain an intelligent interest in the foreign work than by a monthly meeting devoted to the study of this special line of activity? Where can the wide-awake pastor find a better chance to interest and instruct his people in the big things of the Kingdom? By all means let us have back the monthly concert of prayer.

But this meeting needs reforming as to method and treatment. There should be more brain work, more planning, more variety; in a word, more life. The meeting should easily be the most interesting mid-week service of the month.

In this connection we would commend the monthly missionary topics soon to appear in the handbook issued by The Congregationalist. These are prepared by Dr. Gates, the Missionary Education Secretary of the Congregational Education Society. The topics for 1921 will be based on Fleming's "Marks of a World Christian" (Association Press). The topics are wide in their sweep and highly suggestive. To the discussion of the themes proposed we would add two elements: the presentation of the important news of the month (packed, say, into a ten-minute speech), and a season devoted entirely to intercession, and conducted by a person skilled in leading out the prayer life of the people. Whatever we do in this line, let us not fail to have it a real fellowship with God in the work of the Kingdom.

A ROYAL SEND-OFF

Dr. and Mrs. Roy E. St. Clair started for their work in the Philippines assured that their supporting church, the First, of Oakland, Cal., was really back of them. The church had a Philippine Sunday. At the morning service, the pastor, Dr. F. J. Van Horn, preached a strong missionary sermon, full of inspiration and information and personal appeal. Then Sec. Henry H. Kelsey conducted the simple and impressive commissioning service, in which Dr. and Mrs. St. Clair dedicated themselves to the work of foreign missions under the American Board.

Happily, the father of Mrs. St. Clair, Rev. A. B. Case, for more than twenty years a missionary of the Board in Mexico, was present, and welcomed these new recruits into the larger missionary family. The large congregation then read, with the new missionaries, the church covenant, thus confirming their adoption of Dr. and Mrs. St. Clair as their own missionaries, and welcoming them as fellow-members of their own church. It was a great morning, but the morning was only half the day. In the evening, a large congregation listened with keen interest to an illustrated lecture on the Philippines, in which Dr. Kelsey set forth the responsibility we Congregationalists now face in the Island of Mindanao. This address was followed by brief talks by Dr. and Mrs. St. Clair. The service was carried to a climax of interest and emotion when all sang most heartily the missionary hymn:—

"From Mindanao's mountains,
From India's coral strand—

Shall we whose souls are lighted—

Waft, waft, ye winds, the story."

Dr. and Mrs. St. Clair spent a week enjoying the hospitality of the church, including a reception on Wednesday evening. At this gathering were present Rev. Charles E. Ewing, returning to missionary service in China after several years at home; and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hausske, going out under the American Board to be business agents of the Judson Smith and Esther Barton Memorial Hospitals. All were to be fellow-passengers on the Tenyo Maru, together with a hundred delegates to the World Sunday School Convention in Tokyo. A Philippine movie film was given at the reception, and five Filipino men, students in Oakland, gave musical numbers on native instruments.

"There's life alone in duty done and rest alone in striving."

TURKEY

Cable Bulletins—Expanded

Bits of news from Asia Minor appear almost daily in the foreign departments of our newspapers. Sometimes they tell of events we have not heard of. Sometimes they refer to events long past, of which rumors have only lately reached the press. The Missionary Herald tries to share with its readers important cabled news, and to give the brief items enough explanation and addition to make them intelligible. Here follows a message received early in October:—

Adana. Near East Relief workers serve 106,000 portions of soup and carry on relief work for 20,000 refugees while the city is under fire and cut off from outside world and from supplies. One worker becomes 'soup expert,' builds a fuel-saving stove, and manages the soup kitchen, so that nourishing soups are served at less than ten cents a portion.

Talas. Hospital destroyed by fire. Near East workers save one-third provisions and instruments. Workers and patients safe. Doctor and three American women move patients, and manage so efficiently that hospital work does not stop."

This hospital was one of the largest and best equipped of the American Board institutions, which was placed at the disposal of the Near East Relief workers. It was of stone, three stories high, with sunny porches and set in a walled inclosure.

Rev. Joseph W. Beach, one of the 1919 additions to our Turkey staff, and son of Pres. David N. Beach, of Bangor Theological Seminary, with workers from Cesarea, "obtain permission to visit prison camps of the Nationalists (Kemalists) at Nigdeh.

They find and aid a number of French officers and soldiers. Permission was obtained from Mustapha Kemal to allow the Near East mail bags to carry mail for prisoners. The Near East individual remittance department is ready to forward money for the families of prisoners."

Adabazar. Miss Mary E. Kinney, missionary of the Woman's Board, stayed in Adabazar when Kemalists left the city ten days without any government. Robberies and murders occurred, but Miss Kinney was able to keep the orphanage running quietly and safely until a military train carried them to Ismidt.

Bardizag. Mr. and Mrs. John H. Kingsbury ran the Bardizag orphanage safely during Nationalist trouble in that region, and while residents of the town fled." Mr. Kingsbury, an American Board missionary, who reached his field in 1919, had previously served for several years as a term worker, so that he knew the language and was quite able to manage affairs acceptably to every one.

Ismidt. Eighteen thousand Greek and Armenian refugees are being aided in Ismidt, homes being built for them from lumber of former German cloth factory, bombarded during hostilities. Sailors from the United States battleships vote each to adopt a child at the children's tubercular hospital for Christmas Day festivities. The orphanages all need books and substantial toys."

When Brousa Surrendered

The Fourth of July and the three or four days following witnessed unique celebration exercises so far as our own staff and the Near East workers in Brousa were concerned. Miss Edith F. Parsons, a Woman's

THE AMERICAN HOSPITAL AT TALAS

This building was recently destroyed by fire (see "Cable Bulletin Expanded")

Board of the Pacific worker, gives a graphic description of the week:—

"We are waiting," she says, "for the advancing Greek army. We are not quite sure whether we are also waiting for the English. We have the Americans spread out all over town, in order to extend the ægis of their personality in case anything goes wrong.

"Everything stayed very quiet until Thursday, the 8th, though we heard aéroplanes frequently going over the city and constant reports of the nearness of the Greeks, and then on the 8th they came. When we got definite word that the Greeks were within an hour of the city, I went over to Set-Bashi, as Miss Jeannie Jillson there was not very well. I took our Turkish manservant, but, dear me, the streets were quiet to the point of being almost empty; only a few people running to get home, until we were really over to the center of town.

"There I had the good luck to see the actual surrender of the city. The Greeks sent in only five men to take it, an officer and guard of four, all on horseback, which was a very daring and at the same time a very conciliatory thing to do. Those who were left of the Turkish city officials called a meeting and sent for the leaders of the Greek community; and these were not very quick about going, as they thought they might be going to be put in prison. They got there just in time to be present when the summons to surrender arrived, and everybody went down to the foot of the town-hall stairs and received the officer with a white flag; and then they all went in together, and the man who had been chosen to represent the Vali handed over his sword, and it was done.

"I was opposite the town hall when they did it, but it was not until it dawned on me what the white flag was for that I realized what I was watching. Then the Greek deputation rode away, and it was half an hour more before the army began entering the city. We had all warned the Greeks over and over again to be quiet; that, of course, if armies came they would not stay, for by all the treaty maps ever seen, Brousa was to be Turkish.

"But when you talk that way before a thing happens, you just don't realize how it is going to feel when it happens. For it lacks only six years of being 600 years since the Turks captured Brousa from the Greeks, and that is a long while to wait! At the same time, I have it from a French girl who was on the lower street as they marched in, that the Greeks were just too dazed to do anything at the very first. Then some few Turks, I suppose wanting to make themselves acceptable, called 'Zito' (Vive, Hurrah!), and then it just went like a wave. You could hear it all up the hills.

"Seriously, the self-control of both the army and the Greek community has been so far perfectly wonderful, especially when you think what they have to remember of wrongs done them and their families.

"Naturally, it is bitter for the Turks. They could cheerfully surrender; in fact, all except the Tchetes were clamoring for a chance to surrender to the English. I do not think they would have minded surrendering to the French or to Americans, but, next to Armenians, there is no one it could hurt worse to surrender to than to the Greeks. The dramatic, poetic justice of the thing somehow does not appeal to them. The fact that theft is punished most severely, and that the Greek soldiers pay for all they get in town, ought to appeal, but I am not sure it does. The main machinery of the city government goes right on, too, only there is a commandant of the city who is Greek; and in each of the police stations there is, in addition to the regular police, a Greek soldier and one of the Greek young men of the community to act as interpreter, etc. And of course the soldiers are all through the city, and a good part of the hospital is given over to them; so that Miss Billings, director of the hospital, has very interesting times between her Greek and her Turkish medical staffs."

Miracles and Revelations

Letters which come from those who still serve in Turkey are full of marvelous, true tales of answers to prayer, of sudden deliverances, and of revelations of what Christian love leads Christian people to do. Such a letter is one which reached us in late September from Rev. James K. Lyman, whose station is Marash, but who has gone up and down the country administering relief, establishing orphanages, and helping the village people to look upward for help and to plan to take up life again. We quote a few paragraphs from this letter:—

"I have longed to visit these places and see what our orphanages are doing, but the Marash war and the events which followed did not make it possible for me to travel in those parts. However, I at length set out to make the rounds. . . .

Prayer Answered

"In Yarpouz, we found the Armenians getting on well considering conditions in most places. It is true they had evil days. The man with whom I stayed said: 'We heard that our neighbors were coming to kill us. I went into the house and called my wife. We took the family Bible and read from it, and prayed that God would watch over us. While we yet prayed, they opened the door and came in with their guns and swords. We do not know how, but God touched their hearts, and they turned and went as they had come.' Those neighbors afterward confessed that they came to kill, but somehow were restrained at the last moment."

Because Mr. Lyman and his carts were robbed and one of his guards killed in a desolate portion of the way to another of the villages where there was an orphanage, it was decided that he should return by another road, "by way of Chardack," through Circassian villages, which he says reminded him of his native land—"gardens with vegetables, orchards with apples, plums, peaches, etc., gabled houses all plastered and whitewashed; an Aryan race, eager for schools for their children and ready to take the Gospels I offered them."

Then comes the story of the orphanage at Albustan, which Mr. Lyman had established six months earlier, placing in charge the pastor, Garabed Khoja Hassessian. "He had many difficulties. For a while the building was taken over by the Turkish soldiers. We heard of it and sent a telegram asking them to respect American rights. This had the desired effect, for without any warning they called the Khoja and handed him the keys of the house.

A Latter Day Parable

"But the most interesting story Garabed Khoja tells concerns one of the orphan boys. During the winter, when the snow was on the ground and the weather was so cold that they were not opening their shops, a small boy, five or six years of age, was staying in the big mosque. The boy was sick, and for two or three weeks had been unable to get about, and no one had taken care of him. Finally, the stench from the sick boy became so bad that the Mullah said:—

"We must have this boy moved; this is becoming unbearable."

"The registrar for the ward said, 'This boy must be moved, for who can come here to worship?'

"The rich man of the city said: 'How can we say our prayers with such a stench? This boy must be moved.'

"Then it occurred to some one to send him to the American orphanage. So they sent a gendarme to inquire of Garabed Khoja if he would take the boy into the orphanage. He said he would take him. When he inquired if the boy had any sores, the gendarme replied, 'Only a small one or two.' When the boy arrived and the Khoja saw him, he was amazed, for he had never in his life seen anything that would compare with that boy. He said: 'Why did you bring him here? He will most certainly die.'

"The boy had his chin stuck fast to his breast. Both arms were stuck fast to his sides, and his clothes and his fez were grown fast. He was full of sores from head to foot. The Khoja heated some water, and proceeded to remove his clothes and give him a bath. Then he put some medicine on the sores, and the boy howled with all his might. However, the medicine proved beneficial, and in a few days all the sores dried up and the boy recovered. He is the brightest and the cheeriest little chap. He is a Kurd and his name is Hassan.

"Now the Turks come and ask where is the boy that was in the mosque. They refuse to believe that this is the same boy. But when he tells them that he is the boy and that his name is Hassan, they have to believe.

"One Moslem who came said: 'Our Mullah, and our registrar, and our richest man would cast the boy out in the winter, but you took him in and cared for him. That is what we should have done, but we did not. This shows that your religion is stronger and better than ours.'

The Lame, the Halt, and the Blind

"The Kurdish Khoja who has helped Garabed Khoja in getting the children says: 'Of all the thirty-five children that they let you have, there was not one that wasn't lame, blind, with fever, full of sores, or something wrong. They didn't give you one single child that was healthy and strong.'

"Some of the people have tried to get the children to run away, telling them 'the Khoja will make Christian dogs of you.' However, the Khoja has taught them some hymns and some Psalms and the Lord's Prayer.

Almost every day some one calls some of the boys and examines them to see what they are learning. The boys will repeat the hymns and Psalms, and then the people will shake their heads and say, 'This doesn't sound like Ghaurlik (Christian teaching); there isn't anything bad in this.' In this way, not only the children are learning something, but the people are also learning something from the children.

"When we consider the difficulties under which the orphanages have been started, it is nothing less than a miracle that anything has survived. How they have survived and succeeded, in spite of opposition, only God knows. The Armenians in Gerksun and Alubstan both say, 'Had it not been for the orphanage, we would none of us be alive today.' When one thinks of the faith and love that Garabed Khoja and Kevork Khoja have put into this service for these children, one is reminded of the Christ and his service on earth; and I think of Nazile, the Armenian widow who helps Garabed Khoja in caring for these children. The Turks have killed her husband. She lost her three children in the recent Marash war. They were massacred. Yet there she is, giving her life to help the Turkish and Kurdish orphans."

MICRONESIA

At Kusaie

Four months of time are necessary to carry a letter to Kusaie, and four months more are needed to bring a reply; so that Miss Jane Baldwin's letter, dated March 24, did not reach her Boston correspondent until July. It was full of rejoicing over the visit of Dr. and Mrs. Pedley, of Japan, to the Islands, a description of which appeared in the Missionary Herald of June, 1920, although Miss Baldwin mourns the brevity of their stay, and says: "I seem to be continually thinking of the things unsaid for lack of time;" but "may be this inspiring visit is only a foretaste of what is to follow. We have waited for twenty-one years for a visitor, and now that it is proved that Micronesia is reachable, shall we not have more?"

She goes on to describe another surprise visitor, the Iju Ran, the little schooner which used to ply between the island stations, and whose traveling days were supposed to be over after the hurricane of a year and a half ago. Miss Baldwin's letter runs:—

"On January 30, a small schooner was sighted. When near enough to recognize, what was our surprise to see the Iju Ran sailing past our house for Star Harbor. I went down immediately and found that the boat had been drifting for forty-seven days, had passed through heavy storms, when the tiny craft was nearly swallowed up by the great waves, and the water supply was nearly exhausted. One aged teacher, a former scholar of Dr. Pease, and his wife were on board. She was very weak, as she had not been able to eat for four weeks. Some of the sailors were also ill after they got on shore, owing to the change to hearty food after the rations of one cracker a day.

"On March 14, the passengers, captain, and one sailor went on by steamer to Jaluit. The Iju Ran was at our port, Lela, when Miss Hoppin sent supplies—rice, soap, and kerosene—for the school; and it was fine to have our own ship to bring them round to us, without their being damaged by going through the waves on the reef. Some think she is not worth repairing, but the sailor boys are calking and painting, as they love their little boat. We do need a larger and a stronger one, however, for the Marshall work, and I hope the Board can grant one.

The Printing Press

"The 59,600 pages printed last year represent an immense amount of labor. We have only a small hand press, with a limited amount of type.

Often the k's are insufficient in number, and the printers have to change and work for an hour or two, in order to put the page through. In addition, the papers have to be laid out singly to dry; and when 1,000 Christian Endeavor Topics and Daily Readings were printed for the Marshalls, one-third of our first floor was carpeted with papers. Our boys do all of this work out of school hours, while others are gathering food. We sadly need a large press, and hope it may come to us."

CHINA

Straws Show the Wind's Direction

Our Shaowu Mission has a field the size of the State of Massachusetts, with a population of 1,500,000. Our force consists of upward of fifteen missionaries and 125 native workers. There are thirty-three organized churches, sixty regular preaching stations, nearly nine hundred baptized communicants, and more than a thousand enrolled adherents. A recent letter from Rev. Edwin D. Kellogg tells of insistent calls for advance and enrollments of many new inquirers. He says:—

"I have just returned from a thirteen days' trip to our southernmost outposts, and some of the unusual things that happened on this trip I mention below.

"At Wan An Tsai, a large market town where the work has been discouraging for several years, I took five into membership, which increased the membership by some 30 per cent. Probably so many were never received there at one time before.

"In Taining, a district city where our work has been at a standstill for several years, and where no impression has been made on the gentry of the city, a young man of thirty-two was received into membership. He owns one of the largest cloth shops, and opposite his place of business, on the busiest street of the city, has been opened a lecture hall, where at least twice a week lectures and evangelistic services are held. He himself is buying Christian books and loaning them to his friends, quite a number of whom he is leading in the new way he has found.

"As he himself said: 'Why, I didn't know what this Jesus was before, and here I've been walking the wrong road for these several years. I want to get all my friends and the leading men of the city into this new way that I have found.'

"He further added, in explanation of his constant attendance at church, 'When I'm tempted to stay away for some important business reason, my heart is very much disturbed, so much so that I cannot stay away from the church services.' It looks as though a new day had dawned for this city of Taining, which has so baffled us these many years.

"At Ta Tien Shi, also in the Taining District, the leading man of a nearby town has been won. The attendance at church has been twenty or thirty, on the average. He has set 100 as the mark to be attained during the year, and the church seems in a fair way to reach it. He himself, because no other suitable man was found for day-school teacher of the local church school, has taken up the task; and because he is anxious to prepare several of the pupils for admission to the academy at Shaowu, is working overtime, teaching from 8 A.M. to 5.30 P.M.

"During Chinese New Year's I helped dedicate the new church at the county seat, after which Mr. Siao, our active preacher there, took me out on one of the main roads to Kiangsi Province, over which I doubt if any missionary had walked before.

"After twenty miles, passing through several large villages entirely unevangelized, we crossed a high ridge into a valley, with villages dotting the valley floor and nestled in the surrounding foothills. Last January, Mr. Siao had visited here on the urgent invitation of the people, and had rented a 'Place of Prayer.' This time, when within about a mile of there, we were met by some fifty or sixty of the best men of the district, who had come out to welcome the man from a far country. Furthermore, they had brought a band of four pieces to escort us; and whenever we passed through a village, firecrackers were set off, and when we entered the new chapel the noise was deafening and the smoke so dense we could scarcely see. New seats had been made, and generally they had prepared a most unusual reception.

"That night and the next day were spent in meetings in the chapel and in the surrounding villages. It rained quite hard the second night, and no large crowd was expected, but some came in from more than a mile away, in spite of driving rain and darkness.

"To one old man I said, 'I didn't expect you to come in on such a night as this.'

"To which he replied, 'Do you suppose I would stay at home when such important news had been brought by so honorable a guest from so many thousand miles away?'

"The meeting dissolved somewhat unwillingly about midnight, which indicates how much they want the Good News to come to their district. One hundred and seven enrolled inquirers is another indication.

"The China for Christ Movement, which is the Chinese counterpart of the Interchurch World Movement at home, has found expression in the formation at Shaowu of a City Evangelistic Committee, which seeks to enroll Christians from the three city churches and from the Y. M. C. A. of the Boys' Academy, and to form them into bands of two or three members each, each band promising to function at least once a week. The objectives are street preaching, home prayer meetings, prisons, soldier and boat-landing meetings; Sunday school work and bookselling; village evangelism, government school Bible classes, etc. The spring meeting at Yangkow, early in June, has the China for Christ Movement as its general topic.

"At Yangkow, the garrison of 200 soldiers march to church every Sunday afternoon. At Shuin Chang, the soldiers propose to borrow a temple and invite our preacher to preach to them every Sunday. The civil and military heads all attended church on a recent visit there by Mr. McClure.

"These are a few of the straws which show which way the wind blows. Do you wonder we feel that we are living in a new era, and long to be furnished with the weapons which are needed to enter the open doors and possess the land? As our Pastor Chang says, 'The time is at hand.'"

DEATHS

June 24. In Kuliang, China, Robert Lowrey, son of Rev. and Mrs. Obed S. Johnson, of Canton, South China Mission.

A woman long connected with missionary circles was Mrs. N. G. Clark, who died in West Roxbury, September 30, at the age of eighty-four years. She was the widow of Dr. Nathaniel G. Clark, for nearly thirty years Secretary of this Board, and the daughter of Rev. Isaac R. Worcester, a member at one time of the Prudential Committee.

Mrs. Clark was one of the last surviving charter members of the Woman's Board of Missions, and was one of its vice-presidents until her death. She was actively interested in founding the School for Girls in Spain, which is now located at Barcelona; and the School for Girls in Turkey, which has become Constantinople College.

Funeral services were held in Mrs. Clark's old home in West Roxbury, Dr. E. H. Byington, pastor of her church, and Dr. James L. Barton, of the American Board, conducting them. The only surviving one of Dr. and Mrs. Clark's three children is Mrs. James W. Rollins, of Milton, Mass.

The death, on October 11, in Newburyport, Mass., of Mr. Charles A. Bliss, removed a good friend of the American Board and a former member of its Prudential Committee. Mr. Bliss was a prominent citizen, active in all good works. He had held directorates in the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Young Men's Christian Associations, and been prominent in the local Association as well as in Central Congregational Church, of Newburyport. Mr. Bliss is survived by a widow and six children, as well as three sisters and three brothers, one of whom is a missionary of the American Board, Dr. Edward L. Bliss, of Shaowu, China.

THE 110TH YEAR

Report of the Prudential Committee for the Home Department for the year ending August 31, 1920 (in part)

THE APPROPRIATIONS

When the Committee met in October, 1919, to make the appropriations for our nineteen missions, covering every department of work, they were confronted by the necessity of either adding $305,000 to the amount of the previous year, or of closing a large number of schools and other institutions and calling home scores of missionaries. The leading factors in the situation were the adverse rate of exchange, especially in the Far East, and the enhanced cost of living in practically every land, necessitating larger salaries for both missionaries and native laborers. So much has been said and written upon this subject, that we need not go into detail in this report. The conditions have been most extraordinary, and future historians desiring to study the course of foreign finance in the years following immediately upon the war will find the 1919 and 1920 files of the Missionary Herald instructive reading. After struggling with the matter during the war period, and after making sundry minor increases in appropriations for salaries and work, the point had been reached when the Board was constrained to ask its constituents to make possible a marked increase or to determine upon radical reductions in its work.

The latter course could hardly be thought of in a day when the foreign missionary cause has come to be recognized as of primary importance in the work of world reconstruction, and when statesmen and economists are vying with one another in beseeching the Church to proclaim her gospel of justice and love to the ends of the earth. In fact, your Committee did not dwell upon the possibility of retrenchment. The Congregational people had stood by their Board throughout the war years, responding again and again to its appeals, and without remitting their giving to national and other causes. Next to our confidence that God was summoning us to meet the new crisis manfully, the record of those years became our warrant for voting the largest single increase in appropriations ever made in the history of the Board.

We made the plunge before it was possible to formulate definite plans for the enlargement of our income. We realized that should the year end with an unprovided-for deficit as large as $305,000, it would be a staggering blow to our work. It took courage and faith to vote such an increase. Our confidence was not misplaced.

THE CAMPAIGN FOR FUNDS

At the meeting of the National Council, held in Grand Rapids last October, after prolonged and earnest debate over the financial needs of our missionary boards and American educational institutions, provision was made for a commission of one hundred persons to inaugurate a five years' intensive campaign among the churches, stressing missionary education and finance. The name for the movement, chosen by the Commission, was "The Congregational World Movement," and the financial objective adopted for 1919-20 was the raising of an extra fund of $3,000,000 as an emergency effort in behalf of our boards and colleges. It was realized that such a sum fell far short of meeting the situation in which our Congregational interests had become involved as a result of conditions during and after the war; but having in mind the necessity of completing the Pilgrim Memorial Fund for pensioning aged ministers, which the denomination had decided upon as its financial objective in the Tercentenary year, it was not thought wise to attempt a larger measure of relief.

It appeared to your Committee that this movement offered the best, really the only means for increasing our income to match the increase in our appropriations. It would be obviously inappropriate and futile for the Board to join in a union effort of this kind, and at the same time campaign for a large special fund of its own. It was decided, accordingly, to place the securing of $305,000 at the head of our list of emergency needs. Of the $3,000,000 sought for by the Congregational World Movement, the foreign interests were to receive $965,000, which was to be distributed two-thirds to the American Board and one-third to the Woman's Boards. Should the entire amount be subscribed, and there be no falling off in the regular income of the Board, the increase in appropriations would be met, and there would remain $337,333 for the special and pressing needs of our institutions around the world.

The officers of the Board joined heartily in the campaign, which culminated in a financial canvass in May, coincident with that of many other denominations affiliated with the Interchurch World Movement. Our churches quite generally responded to the appeal, notwithstanding the pressure of the Pilgrim Memorial Fund, whose canvass was not finished until March 1. The plan was followed of asking the churches to accept for this special fund an apportionment equal to 150 per cent of the regular apportionment. Some 2,000 churches achieved this result, and many others did exceedingly well. A considerable number of churches found it impracticable to make the attempt in the spring, but gave assurance they would undertake to raise their share in the fall. Reports have been received of $1,700,000 subscriptions actually made, and careful estimates on the part of state superintendents and field workers indicate that an additional sum of $600,000 may be looked for, making in all $2,300,000. On this basis, the American Board would receive $492,200, and the Woman's Boards, $246,100. We prefer, however, to be more conservative, and to estimate only upon what is known to be subscribed. On this basis, the American Board will receive $363,800, which sum is applicable upon the deficit of the year, and will be paid in monthly installments from the treasury of the Congregational World Movement as collected from the churches up to May 1, 1921.

THE REGULAR INCOME OF THE BOARD

While all this campaigning was going on in behalf of the Emergency Fund, the churches did not remit their efforts in respect to the regular support of the Board's work. At the beginning of the fiscal year, the Home Department estimated a gain from church and individual donations of $100,000. We are happy to report that this figure has been exceeded, the gain being $106,735.70, which is the largest single-year gain of regular donations which we can recall. This figure analyzed shows an advance in offerings from churches of $58,307.96; from Sunday schools and Young People's Societies of $4,491; from individual gifts of $43,936.74. In addition, it should be noted that individual friends sent to the Board the magnificent sum of $184,136.91 for special objects not included in our appropriations, a gain over the former year of $51,579.01.

All things considered, it has been a year full of encouragement as to the growing interest and devotion of our churches toward their foreign work. If any further evidence on that score is needed, it will be found in the fact that the three Woman's Boards have raised during the year the sum of $496,234.03, which is a gain over 1919 of $102,298.06.

Had our other sources of income kept pace with the donations, the year's outcome would have been quite different from what we must report. There has been a falling off in receipts from legacies, after they have been subjected to the thirding process through the Twentieth Century Fund, of $44,616.72; in matured conditional gifts of $69,516.67; and in general income of $998.22, making a total loss in this department of income of $115,131.61. Striking the balance between our gains and losses, in such receipts as are applicable upon the regular appropriations of the Board, we register a loss of $8,395.91. Had it not been for the establishment of the Twentieth Century Fund for the equalizing of legacy receipts, our loss in that item would have been far larger. After a series of years in which our legacy receipts have been increasing and the Twentieth Century Fund has been building up, we come to this year of marked shrinkage. The wisdom of the Fund's establishment has been signally demonstrated.

It remains to state the total receipts of the Board from all sources. Adding together our donations, regular and special, our income from legacies, matured conditional gifts, interest on various funds, gifts of Woman's Boards, and what has already been received from the Congregational World Movement, we secure the impressive figure of $1,651,546.99, a gain over the total of 1919 of $128,244.40.

CLOSING A DECADE

With this year we finish a new decade, the eleventh in the Board's history, and it proves to be both interesting and heartening to glance backward through the column of receipts as found in our annual reports. The past ten years may be known as the million dollar decade. We passed the long-hoped-for and worked-for million dollar mark in 1911, and it is gratifying to report that we have not dropped below that standard; rather we have marched steadily on, until we see ourselves nearing the two million dollar mark. Comparing the receipts of the year just passed with those of the first year of the decade, we find we have registered a gain of $656,132.63, or an average of something over $65,000 per year. In the previous decade, between 1890 and 1900, the gain was $257,456.97. We might wish that our receipts had advanced at a more rapid rate, but the steady upward trend through so long a period would seem to indicate that we are following sound and fairly effective policies in our efforts to enlist the coöperation of churches and individuals.

THE INTERCHURCH WORLD MOVEMENT

The attitude of the American Board towards this coöperative movement among Protestant mission boards, which met with such an unexpected setback, has been set forth extensively in the literature of the year. It needs only to be dealt with here as a matter of record, and perhaps by way of registering a maturer judgment. The Interchurch, in its deepest significance, arose from the increasing desire of the missionary forces of America, home and foreign, to unite in a program of world-wide advance. It was born of a passion for the redemption of the world through Jesus Christ. The impulse toward such a movement, which had been growing for several years, was greatly accelerated by the national and social conditions produced or revealed by the war. In the face of such a world, for the Church of Christ to present a divided front was felt to be a sin against God and man. If the churches could not be brought to think together theologically, they could at least, so it was argued, be persuaded to work together for a great world purpose. The signing of the Armistice brought a divine compulsion to the churches of America; they considered they had received a mandate from God to unite in a campaign of service as broad as the human race. Unfortunately this purely spiritual quickening was accompanied by an over-reliance upon certain methods which the war philanthropy had developed for stirring the public conscience and securing the vast sums which were needed. From this point of view the Interchurch was an attempt to emulate the war drives for a wider purpose. By a process of sound reasoning it was felt that a united advance, which should solicit the giving of life and money on an unprecedented scale, could be warranted only on the basis of a fresh and accurate study of world needs. It was realized that the war methods could not and should not be imitated in the matter of asking for colossal sums in behalf of loosely estimated needs. The movement must have under it the solid basis of fact. Hence the large place which the survey came to hold in the Interchurch plans, and hence, alas! the delay which carried the financial canvass beyond the trajectory of the war spirit and enthusiasm. When the canvass was made, the psychological moment had passed; the post-war reaction had set in.

Two denominations, one affiliated with the Interchurch only in its educational plans, the other not at all—the Northern Methodist and the Southern Baptist—carried through highly successful campaigns in the spring and fall of 1919, the one securing pledges on a five-year basis for the magnificent sum of $113,000,000, the other for about $80,000,000. In the spring of 1920, we found ourselves in an atmosphere far less favorable for such efforts. The moral enthusiasms of the war were on the wane; the public, Christian as well as general, was weary of drives. In the light of the situation as we now understand it, the results of the united simultaneous campaign of May, 1920, were surprisingly large. A number of the smaller denominations raised their full budgets, thereby increasing their income three and in one case fourfold. The stronger denominations, while not reaching their goals, secured far larger sums than would have been possible had it not been for the stimulus of the united effort. As for ourselves, it seems clear that the raising of the emergency fund, which has saved the day for the American Board and for other Congregational interests, would not even have been attempted but for our alignment with the other denominations through the Interchurch.

Had the movement been judged solely by its influence upon denominational effort, it would have been pronounced, in the main, a success. Unfortunately the officials laid great stress upon the raising of a fund of $40,000,000 from the general public, outside of the Church, which was to be distributed among the cooperating societies at the close of the campaign. This effort proved to be such a dismal failure that the Boards were forced to pay the sums they had underwritten for the heavy expenses of the long campaign without any offsetting benefit from the general fund. As a result, several denominations withdrew, public criticism became rife, and the movement has been brought to a standstill until such time as reorganization of a radical sort can be brought about. The underwriting of the American Board, following the conservative recommendation of the National Council, was for only four per cent upon our expected share in the $3,000,000 Emergency Fund, and amounted to $36,000. This obligation has been met. We are confident the benefits we have received outweigh the cost of this great venture in Christian internationalism.

We are not content, however, to leave the matter in this way. Apart from the mistake which was made as to the timing of the financial canvass, we are inclined to think the methods which were employed in the publicity and finance departments of the Interchurch were not calculated to produce the best results in a campaign of this nature. After all, missions is a religious enterprise, whose success in the long run must depend upon the deep and quiet motives of Christian character and purpose. Boldness is called for in behalf of Christ's work, and rapid progress can often be made, but not as a result of spectacular display or the pressure of war-drives. Tastes vary in such matters, and we would not be over critical where the motive is lofty; but to our Congregational way of thinking, the campaign methods of the Interchurch partook over much of the ways of the professional money-raiser. They were too superficial, too mechanical, too noisy, too expensive. We trust the lesson has been learned once for all as to the danger of a faulty method frustrating an enterprise of noble conception and scope.

The great idea of the Interchurch must not, cannot be allowed to die. The conception of the whole Church facing the whole task and moving unitedly to its performance, having once been given to the world, will find some new form of realization. We would extend our sympathy to the interdenominational committee which is studying the reconstruction of the movement on a greatly simplified basis, and pray that their labors may be crowned with success.

RECRUITS

The success of the work of the American Board depends, in the last analysis, on our securing the enlistment of an adequate supply of well-qualified new missionaries—men and women of caliber, leadership, and devotion, qualified to play a large part in the intricate adjustments that face non-Christian peoples today.

During the past year three factors did much toward shaping the recruiting work of the Board—the Student Volunteer Convention at Des Moines, the campaign for Life Service of the Interchurch World Movement, and the after effects of the war.

Mission Boards have come to recognize the great quadrennial gathering of the Student Volunteer Movement as one of the largest factors in bringing to the students of America such missionary knowledge and enthusiasm as shall lead them into missionary service. In spite of some rather severe criticisms of this year's program, the overwhelming majority of the 7,000 delegates who gathered from all parts of America for the ten days' convention at Des Moines went back to their colleges with a clearer vision of world service than they had ever had before. How many of them have already made actual missionary decisions as a result of the convention no one can say, but the number is not small. There were many others who felt the challenge of the world's need so strongly that a large number of them will undoubtedly decide for that service.

A part of the Interchurch World Movement's program which received little publicity, but which bulked large in its plans, was the effort to secure recruits for Christian service. Efforts were made to send a team of leaders who had already proved themselves effective with students into every higher educational institution in America. These teams were to present, in the broadest interdenominational way, the imperative call of America and of the world for many types of Christian workers.

This last year, due to the unusual numbers secured by the Woman's Boards, we have obtained the largest group of new recruits ever listed by the Board—seventy-three in all. Of these, seventeen are men, nine are wives, and forty-seven are single women. This large number of workers is a cause for rejoicing. However, we must note with grave concern that of them all only five men are going out as ordained missionaries. The very serious post-war condition of the American theological seminaries is clearly reflected in this fact. Not only has the theological education of many men been retarded by the war, but a number have been deflected from the theological schools into other vocations. Indications point to a somewhat more normal condition in the seminaries during the coming year, and we hope to have better results to show. Yet we have nowhere in sight today enough recruits to meet the most urgent demands of the field for ordained workers. It is easy to picture what it means to our nineteen missions to have only five ordained men sent out to them in any year. Are there not, in some of our overchurched American towns, young Congregational ministers who will catch the vision of ministry in some of the great mission fields, where one's parish may be a county or district, and where he may have a molding influence on church and society in this critical period of transition?

We are glad to be able to send out to fill vitally important positions eight physicians, five of these being women. In the case of medical workers, we seem to have gained through the war, which has opened out to both doctors and nurses new visions of wide service. We have need, however, of many more than eight doctors for positions of critical need and great opportunity.

It is interesting that no less than twenty-six of our new missionaries are going on short-term engagements. Many of these are just out of college. For the most part they go as teachers in colleges and academies. From our past experience, we confidently predict that most of these will become so attached to the people and work to which they go that later on, after returning home for special study, they will eventually apply for life service.

ADMINISTRATIVE CHANGES

Year by year the work of the Prudential Committee grows in volume and importance. Our increased missionary force and our extending lines make this inevitable. This year the dockets for the fortnightly meetings became so crowded that an arrangement was worked out by which many routine questions, covered for the most part by the handbook rules of the Board, should be determined by the executive officers in their cabinet meeting, the vote of this Committee being given "en bloc." Even so, the dockets are over long, and more frequent meetings may be necessary. The amount of business coming before the Committee is indicated by the fact that during the year 1,009 separate votes were taken, many of these covering a number of items or extensive sub-committee recommendations.

Correspondingly, the executive officers find themselves increasingly limited for time to attend to the work of their departments, a prominent factor in the problem being the steady development of coöperation between the foreign Boards of America and Europe, with resulting journeys, conferences, committee work, etc. A sub-committee of the Prudential Committee has been at work making a fresh study of the executive departments in their operations and relationships, and reports from time to time such increase of staff and such changes as appear necessary. Inevitably the expansion of our home office force, with the mounting cost of living, has made for increased administration expense; we believe, however, not out of proportion to the growing income of the Board. We are determined that the Board's reputation for businesslike thoroughness and dispatch shall be maintained.

In conclusion, let us say that while the year has been one of many difficult problems and of heavy pressure of work, not unmingled with anxiety, it has been a year of exceptional fruitfulness and full of joy in the service. No man can come upon the Prudential Committee of the American Board in these days without the deepest appreciation of the labors of those who have served in former years, and a sense of exaltation over being engaged so directly in the work of Kingdom building at a time when God's spirit is moving in such a marvelous way upon the non-Christian world and upon the Church at home.

TREASURER'S REPORT

For the year ending August 31, 1920

The American Board has suffered a very real loss in the resignation and subsequent death of Mr. Frank H. Wiggin, who for many years has written and presented the Treasurer's Report. He was Treasurer of the American Board for about twenty-four years, always faithful to his trust, and during the time he served as Treasurer the yearly receipts grew from about $650,000 to more than $1,600,000.

A year ago it was stated in the report that the receipts were larger than those of the previous year. The same statement might well be made for this year. The gain for the year just ended over the previous year was $128,244.40. The following table shows the sources from which the income has been received:—

Gifts from churches	$399,890.35
Gifts from individuals	126,971.17
Matured Conditional Gifts	17,350.00
Income from General Permanent Fund	29,236.67
Income from D. Willis James Foundation and Higher Educational Work Endowment	55,354.78
Income from Miscellaneous Funds	54,405.55
Woman's Boards	496,234.03
Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies	18,990.66
Receipts for Special Objects	158,700.81
Legacies	175,421.30
From estate of Solomon H. Chandler, for use as specified in the will	15,086.82
General Income	56,126.20
Congregational World Movement	47,778.65
	$1,651,546.99

It is interesting to note that the churches, which made a large increase in their offerings a year ago, have again made a very substantial increase in their offerings, and that the same is true of individuals. The gains from churches, Sunday Schools, and Christian Endeavor Societies amount this year to $62,790.96, and individuals contributed more this year than last year by $43,936.74. These gifts are gratefully acknowledged by the Board. This is a very encouraging fact when it is considered that during the year very large pledges were made to the Congregational World Movement. All of these pledges have not yet been paid, but the Board has already received a substantial sum on account of the same.

TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND AND LEGACIES

The wisdom of establishing the Twentieth Century Fund for the equalizing of receipts from legacies over a period of years has been proven this year. The amount received from legacies this year was $126,165.45. This is $55,385.32 less than was received from legacies in the year ending August 31, 1919. The total of the Twentieth Century Fund, including income on the Fund and legacies received during the year from estates, amounted to $526,263.90. One-third of this amount.

or $175,421.30, was available for the Board's work, so that from this source the Board has had available for its use $49,255.85 more than was actually received from legacies. Because of the decrease in the amount received from legacies, the Twentieth Century Fund, which showed a balance a year ago of $387,515.70, now shows a balance of $350,842.60.

CONDITIONAL GIFT FUND

The total of the Conditional Gift Fund, including the Danforth and Washburn Funds, is $1,208,781.62. Of this sum $93,822.63 represents fifty-four new Conditional Gifts received during the year. More and more people are realizing the advantage of providing for themselves a regular income for life and are appreciating the certainty, afforded by the adoption of the Conditional Gift Plan, that their money will be used as they desire after their death for the work of the American Board.

GENERAL PERMANENT FUND

The gain in the General Permanent Fund during the year was $6,778.83. This is much smaller than the gain for the previous year. This Fund now amounts to $579,671.76.

NEW FUNDS DURING THE YEAR

AMES FUND, for support of missionary teacher in connection with American College at Pasumalai, India	$2,185.00

WOMAN'S BOARDS AND CANADA CONGREGATIONAL FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The Woman's Boards and the Canada Congregational Foreign Missionary Society have, as usual, coöperated in the work in a very generous manner, and these Societies are entitled to a large amount of gratitude. The amounts received and expended from these sources have largely increased.

EXPENDITURES

Attention was called last year to the large increase in expenses caused by the high rate of exchange in China and the increase in transportation. While exchange rates were unusually high a year ago, they have increased greatly during the past year, and the cost of transportation, of both missionaries and freight, has also increased. The cost of exchange this year has been $252,449.37, and the cost of travel and outfits for missionaries has been $177,231.51.

SUMMARY OF RESULTS

A summary of the results for the year shows that the missions cost	$1,731,147.86
Administration and other home expenses were	142,230.72
Underwriting of the Interchurch World Movement	36,000.00
Total expenses	$1,909,378.58
As previously stated, the total receipts were	$1,651,546.99
Amount due from Coöperating Societies in excess of amount due the previous year	8,082.17
Last year's balance	7,205.06
Total	$1,666,834.22
Total disbursements	$1,909,378.58
Total receipts	1,666,834.22
	$242,544.36

The Treasurer last year stated that the American Board needed annually at least $2,000,000, but with the increased cost of everything connected with the work of the Board, it is clear that a far larger sum is needed today. Notwithstanding the increase of $128,244.40 in income this past year, the Board has been obliged to close its year with a deficit of $242,544.36. So many applications of a pressing nature are coming from all parts of the world for help from the American Board, that the Board must look to its constituency for yet greater financial support if it is to meet these requests even in a small degree. This is, however, not a time to be discouraged, but rather a time to be grateful that in spite of the troublesome conditions into which the world has been plunged, the American Board has been able, with the support of its constituency, to carry on its work without curtailment.

Appended hereto is a financial statement, together with a certificate of the American Audit Company and a certificate of the Auditors of the American Board.

Respectfully submitted,

FREDERICK A. GASKINS, Treasurer.
